Title: Amazing quality, amazing value, amazing service!

Product Reviews

Comments: Once again, my hat is off to Jerry and the stellar team at WPG. I bought my Ike jacket not only for reenactment to wear with my AGSU (the US Army's modern version of pinks & greens). The quality of the wool material and the workmanship are superb. Schellemans noted that the color is slightly off. It is a hair shade darker and on the green side (less brown) than Heritage Green, which is the shade of the AGSU service coat and of the original WWII service coat in my closet. However, when you understand how the Ike jacket came into service in 1944, it is not unreasonable that there would be color variation among manufacturers and runs. I have worn WPG's Ike Jacket as my uniform to a number of high-profile events and have received nothing but compliments.

Title: Well made Ike Jacket

Comments: I went to an official event and all were amazed how well the jacket was done. Only one small thing bothered me: the inner lining of the beast pockets is a bit visible because the sewing is not done right. Overall great Jacket

Title: Nice jacket for the price!
Comments: I recently ordered the Officer's Ike Jacket to augment my Officer impression. The jacket is well made with the proper side adjustment slides. The sleeves run a little long but nothing that tailoring won't fix. Overall I'm happy with this jacket!

Title: Ike Jacket

Comments: This was unacceptable as to the quality and materials used. Not like the old picture of WPGs Ike Jacket still on line. The closest this came to was Ralph Camden's Bus Driver uniform on the "Honeymooners". I have an original WW 2 officer's Ike and a four pocket service blouse and the color and material was not even close. I don't think the quality of the sewing was up to WPGs standards either

Title: high quality

Comments: I have collected original Ikes for 40 years. This is a time when I wanted one of my own to wear and fit out with insignia. High quality & workmanship to rival any original I have had. This jacket is modeled after the enlisted style because there are button cuffs and no commission stripe on the sleeves but still worn by officers. The best was the shipping, faster than I expected and very welcome to see that. These are well worth the money!

Comments: Very good coat, but the sleeve pattern seems to have been reversed when cut- the sleeves point towards the rear instead of forward-even so, this is only noticeable when on a hanger. When worn it isn't terribly apparent.

Comments: I was concerned about the posts regarding sleeve length. I'm an athletic build and a 46 Reg fits perfectly for length, shoulders, chest, waist, and the sleeves are exactly right. No tailoring needed. I'll put brass buttons on for my Patton late-war 4 star re-creation uniform. I'll use the full-length service coat for the early-war 3 star version. Thanks for a great product. When I order on a weekend, it's on the porch on Tuesday.

Title: What a beautiful jacket!

Product Reviews

Comments: I wanted a Class A Officer Ike Jacket and when this one came available, it fit the bill. I do not usually wear class As unless I am going to a swing dance, or an event that calls for it, but hey! In this beauty you will look and feel like Clark Gable, Jimmy Stewart or even Tyrone Power! Dead accurate, beautiful shade, it's the cat's meow! I don't often wear Class A's when I reenact, I normally wear a flight suit, but when the time came that I needed a dress uniform, I wanted an Ike jacket. Several manufacturers make them, and most are quite nice, but this one captures the look of a 1943 or early 1944 private purchase jacket BEAUTIFULLY. The lining matches those I've been able to examine in museums, or have seen in surplus shops. The fit is quite good, and although a little tailoring wouldn't harm it (most officers' uniforms were tailored), it really doesn't need it. The color is a good shade of OD 51, and the gorge at the neck is small enough to cover how short the ties were in those days. All told, this item is a good reproduction, and the price was definitely right. I'm glad I bought mine.
